

"Everyone Can Write a Resume," by Kendra Wilson

Have you ever attempted home dentistry? Ever thought of plumbing your own house? What about catering your own wedding? You have your skills and resume professionals have theirs. Why would you assume that like any other set of professional services, you can or should "do it yourself"? Though some people successfully install their own plumbing or pull their own teeth, the best outcomes generally come from leaving these services to the professionals.

Though everyone CAN write a resume, not everyone SHOULD. In fact, most people should leave it to the professionals. Resume writing is a combination of graphic design elements, understanding information presentation, and providing skilled editing support to ensure that you have the best end product. Like the wedding you'd never want to cater yourself, the end product is essential. The day, whether it's your wedding or your job interview, may hinge upon the successful professional services you chose.
